BRURIA FINKEL

BRURIA FINKEL'S artwork deals with concepts of cycles and time, ecology, women's issues and tikkunolam, a Hebrew phrase meaning "mend the world." Her art contains sacred geometry, language, and symbolism, both in abstract and familiar imagery.

A multidisciplinary artist, Finkel works in handmade paper sculpture, art books, paintings, and bronze sculpture. Recent artworks include oil pastel on wood veneer. For more than 60 years, Finkel has created permanent public art and temporary art installations. Her art has been shown in numerous exhibitions in U.S. and international museums and galleries, and is included in the Smithsonian Archives in Washington, DC.
